These lands are unsurpassed for fertility by any others in the South. They are situated in the heart of the sugar region of Louisiana, on a navigaole water course open at all seasons of the year to all the ports of the United States, with which they are connected by sail and steam vessels to the North and West. The unail steamers, connecting with Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad to New Gricans, pass twice a day, and crops can be shipped direct from the sugarhouse without any intermediate handling or transportation. The health of the locality is unrivalled by any part of the South or West. Post office and telegraphic communication convenient.

Refer to Charles F. Leverich, New York; Charles U. Walker, Chicago; Ar. Mittenberger and Henry Leverich, New Gricana.
